

Vatulele Island Resort Launches New Pool Villa Category

Six Senses' Hub, Bangkok, August 13, 2008:

Vatulele Island Resort, the operation of which is managed by Six Senses Resorts & Spas, has introduced new luxury pool villa bures to the iconic, award-winning property in Fiji. In addition to this, Vatulele is on track to be formally re-launched as a Six Senses Hideaway towards the end of 2008.

The stunning Deluxe Beach Bures feature a private pool measuring 8 metres x 2.5 metres with vistas toward the ocean and air-conditioning. All bures at Vatulele, including the pool villas, will feature an array of additional personal comforts, including new furnishings and fabrics, flat screen TV, DVD player, sound system, telephone and a well-stocked private wine fridge.

Several other facilities and services have been upgraded to enhance the guest experience. Creative dining options include the gourmet a la carte menu at the Dining Room offering local Pacific Rim cuisine using fresh ingredients sourced from the resort's own organic garden. A newly refurbished bar provides an ideal spot for guests to enjoy a cocktail or healthy juice before or after dinner. Guests can also experience romantic dining on the resort's private one-kilometre beach or a picnic on a nearby island. The resort's well-stocked wine cellar is also a favourite for a private dining experience.

Located on a spectacular island of the Fiji group in the heart of the South Pacific, Vatulele Island Resort is a 25-minute light-aircraft flight from Nadi International Airport. Set back from a stunning stretch of white sand beach, 17 bures offer generous personal space with natural architecture. At either end of the resort's beach are two oversized luxury villas, The Point and Vale Viqi. Vatulele is the only five-star island resort in Fiji with a PADI Golden Palm dive facility and there are 22 world-class diving sites surrounding the resort.
