

Evason Phuket & Six Senses Spa Eco Story

Nature Conservation at Evason Phuket

Evason Phuket, July 2007: Evason Phuket & Six Senses Spa took over an existing building in 2001 with very little plants. Gradually, the landscape and garden have been improved with the philosophy of re-generating a tropical flora as it would have been if the area was left untouched.

The initial boost was 140 adult oil palm trees but a vast variety of tropical plants has been added to create biodiversity. Local plants and fruit trees have been planted to attract wild life and particularly birds. Depending on the time of the year migratory birds like Pacific Reef Egrets and Chinese Pond Heron can be spotted.

An Herbal and Vegetable Garden has been introduced as a supplement to the kitchen but also for guests doing Thai cooking classes to pick their own herbs and vegetables.

The garden has also been planted to create shade from sun and noise.

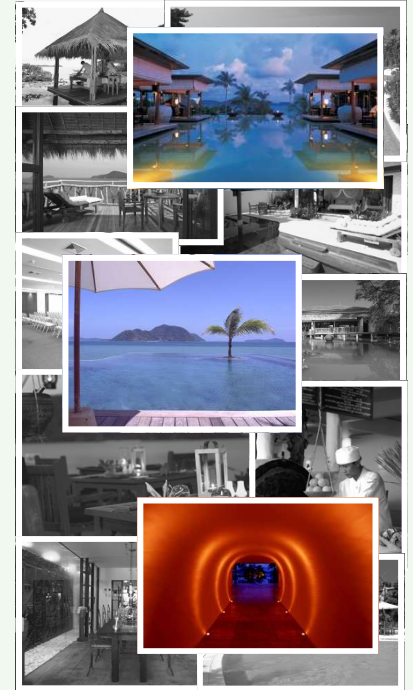

The resort's private beach at Bon Island is surrounded by a beautiful biologically diverse coral reef, while the island itself is also home to numerous animal and plant species. The coral reef is protected through zoning but guest can enjoy snorkelling during high tide. However, it is important that guests enjoying the beach and water refrain from touching and stepping on the corals as well as feeding the fish.
